The Spirit of God With All People: Recognizing and Confirming the Non-Orthodox Gospel of Jesus

John Randolph Richards

This book presents an interpretation of the teachings of Jesus concerning the Spirit of God in both canonical and non-canonical Gospels. This interpretation leads to the conclusion that Jesus was inspired by the Spirit of God with him, but not a divine being who became man. His teachings in the four Gospels, the Gospel of Thomas, and the Q Document collectively indicate that the Spirit of God seeks personal relationships all people, including people of all races, cultures, and sexual orientations. This non-orthodox Gospel of Jesus is founded on this most important relationship, which leads to personal spiritual growth and encourages service to others. Parallels between the non-orthodox Gospel of Jesus with scientific principles and with other modern-day evidence are reviewed to confirm the validity of Jesus' teachings in the canonical and non-canonical Gospels. The relationship between the Spirit of God and a person is described as similar to the relationship between a baby in the womb and a mother. The parallels between the laws of thermodynamics and spiritual principles are discussed to suggest that there is no devil, just the greater evil of nothingness--such as the lack of companionship, food, shelter, health, security, justice, education, opportunity, freedom, hope, and environmental quality. The book encourages all people, religious and non-religious, to recognize the presence of the Spirit of God with them. That is the single purpose of this book. The book presents an entirely independent perspective concerning religion. The author is not a member of any church or other religious organization.
